Brad Neal

Specialist Musculoskeletal Physiotherapist

'The principles that we apply to an elite performer also allow us to treat the general public with the same level of dedication and expertise.'

Brad graduated from the University of Hertfordshire in 2006 with a degree in Physiotherapy, which he obtained alongside completing a sports scholarship for swimming. It was in the pool that his interest in Physiotherapy was born. Training heavily from a young age resulted in regular overuse injuries. At University, exposure to the English Institute of Sport through his scholarship, developed a passion for Sports Medicine.

Not ready to cease his career in the pool, in 2006, Brad went on to complete a Masters Degree in Advanced Musculoskeletal Physiotherapy, which he continued after retiring from competitive swimming in 2007, finishing in 2011. Since graduating, Brad has worked extensively in both the NHS and private sectors, including treating several Olympic swimmers and working with the academy at West Ham United Football Club.
